

Experience, Experiments, Expectations

Creation of a “new smile design” and its execution comes from our past experiences, present experiments, and their reflection for the future expectations.

Experience is based on what we did, our success stories or our failures however more importantly the lessons we learned from them.

Experiments are based on not to repeat our failure attempts once again, and trying to the best we can as of today.

Expectations depend on our past experiences, what we are doing today and being at the state of in search of better ways to go forward. In other words staging our selves at the space of creativity and start thinking outside of the box.

Aesthetic dentistry is mainly based on both technical and emotional aspects. It is an art form. As we keep on improving what ever we are performing today, we should always be in search of realizing the weak parts, missing links, how to improve them and move things forward. As we are at the era of converting from analog to digital horizons we need to know the limits, clinically relevant workflows for our everyday dentistry.